

IPEMED

- INSTITUT DE PROSPECTIVE ÉCONOMIQUE DU MONDE MÉDITERRANÉEN -

The Economic Foresight Institute for the Mediterranean World (IPEMED) is an association created in 2006 under the French law of 1901 and presided by its founder, Jean-Louis Guigou. The institute is a think tank which statutory mission, recognised of general interest, is to bring together the two shores of the Mediterranean, as well as the African and European continents, through the economy.

IPEMED's missions are:

- Creating a vision that makes sense of long-term economic and political action. This vision is the construction of the great « Africa - Mediterranean - Europe » (AME) region.
- Anticipating and scientifically identifying heavy trends to guide private and political actions in accordance with the general interest.
- Helping change behaviours and methods relying on new actors from the civil society, such as entrepreneurs, women, diasporas, youth, etc.

To achieve this, IPEMED strives to:

- Lead a reliable international network made up of economic and political decision-makers, experts and representatives of the civil society.
- Transform reflection into action through publications and work seminars.
- Influence economic and political decision-makers during high-level events.
- Promote projects to develop cooperation in the Mediterranean and, subsequently, between Europe and Africa.

IPEMED is convinced that the Mediterranean can be a hub between Europe and Africa. In this regard, the institute carries the project of a "Verticale Africa - Mediterranean - Europe" foundation that is meant to become the intellectual cluster that will strengthen cooperation between these three regions.
